Hegel's understanding of Enlightenment reason is close to what the historian Peter Gay argues: that Enlightenment is a form of positivist reason which freed itself from the rationalist metaphysics of the 17th century, including the metaphysics of Spinoza. See Peter Gay, The Enlightenment: An Interpretation, vol. 1 (New York: W. W. Norton, 1966).

This chapter continues the social theme by looking at recent scholarship on the role of education in creating elite values, especially in an age of growing nationalism and democracy. A scholarly project based at Bielefeld has examined both the significance of the German Bildungsbürgertum and the comparative history of the relation between university systems and elites.
