Uncle Dynamite (1948) has him impersonating Major Brabazon Plank and there is one passage on the Major who is a minor and his brother the major who is a Miner which is worth all the money on the book. That brings me to Cocktail Time (1958), which in my view is Wodehouse's finest book. Uncle Fred is on the prowl once more, this time untrammelled by the presence of his nephew Pongo who is invariably the fall guy in most of the previous works.
